Bullying Interventions

Action Steps for School Administrators

• Immediately intervene in all bullying incidents.
• Involve parents of bullies and victims of bullying, where appropriate.
• Form "friendship groups" or other supports for students who are victims of bullying.
• Involve school counselors or mental health professionals, where appropriate.
• Assess the awareness and the scope of the bullying problem at your school through student and staff surveys.
• Closely supervise students on the playing fields and in classrooms, hallways, rest rooms, cafeterias and other areas where bullying occurs in your school.
• Conduct school wide assemblies and teacher/staff in-service training to raise awareness regarding the problem of bullying and to communicate a zero tolerance for such behavior.
• Post and publicize clear behavior standards, including rules against bullying, for all students. Consistently and fairly enforce such standards.
• Encourage parent participation by establishing on-campus parents' centers that recruit, coordinate and encourage parents to take part in the educational process and in volunteering to assist in school activities and projects.
• Establish a confidential reporting system that allows children to report victimization and that records the details of bullying incidents.
• Ensure that your school has all legally required policies and grievance procedures for sexual discrimination. Make these procedures known to parents and students.
• Receive and listen receptively to parents who report bullying. Establish procedures whereby such reports are investigated and resolved expeditiously at the school level in order to avoid perpetuating bullying.
• Develop strategies to reward students for positive, inclusive behavior.
• Provide school wide and classroom activities that are designed to build self-esteem by spotlighting special talents, hobbies, interests and abilities of all students and that foster mutual understanding of and appreciation for differences in others.

Strategies for Classroom Teachers

• Provide students with opportunities to talk about bullying and enlist their support in defining bullying as unacceptable behavior.
• Involve students in establishing classroom rules against bullying. Such rules may include a commitment from the teacher to not "look the other way" when incidents involving bullying occur.

• Provide classroom activities and discussions related to bullying and violence, including the harm that they cause and strategies to reduce them.

• Develop a classroom action plan to ensure that students know what to do when they observe a bully/victim confrontation.

• Teach cooperation by assigning projects that require collaboration. Such cooperation teaches students how to compromise and how to assert without demanding. Take care to vary grouping of participants and to monitor the treatment of participants in each group.

• Take immediate action when bullying is observed. All teachers and school staff must let children know that they care and will not allow anyone to be mistreated. By taking immediate action and dealing directly with the bully, adults support both the victim and the witnesses.

• Confront bullies in private. Challenging a bully in front of his/her peers may actually enhance his/her status and lead to further aggression.

• Notify the parents of both victims and bullies when a confrontation occurs, and seek to resolve the problem expeditiously at school.

• Refer both victims and aggressors to counseling whenever appropriate.

• Provide protection for bullying victims, whenever necessary. Such protection may include creating a buddy system whereby students have a particular friend or older buddy on whom they can depend and with whom they share class schedule information and plans for the school day.

• Listen receptively to parents who report bullying and investigate reported circumstances so that immediate and appropriate school action may be taken.

• Avoid attempts to mediate a bullying situation. The difference in power between victims and bullies may cause victims to feel further victimized by the process or believe that they are somehow at fault.

Strategies for Students

Students may not know what to do when they observe a classmate being bullied or experience such victimization themselves. Classroom discussions and activities may help students develop a variety of appropriate actions that they can take when they witness or experience such victimization. For instance, depending on the situation and their own level of comfort, students can:

• seek immediate help from an adult;
• report bullying/victimization incidents to school personnel;
• speak up and/or offer support to the victim when they see him/her being bullied—for example, picking up the victim’s books and handing them to him or her;
• privately support those being hurt with words of kindness or condolence;
• express disapproval of bullying behavior by not joining in the laughter, teasing or spreading of rumors or gossip; and
• attempt to defuse problem situations either single handedly or in a group - for example, by taking the bully aside and asking him/her to "cool it."

Strategies for Parents

The best protection parents can offer their children who are involved in a bully/victim conflict is to foster their child’s confidence and independence and to be willing to take action when needed. The following suggestions are offered to help parents identify appropriate responses to conflict experienced by their children at school:

• Be careful not to convey to a child who is being victimized that something is wrong with him/her or that he/she deserves such treatment. When a child is subjected to abuse from his or her peers, it is not fair to fault the child’s social skills. Respect is a basic right: All children are entitled to courteous and respectful treatment. Convince your child that he or she is not at fault and that the bully’s behavior is the source of the problem.

• It is appropriate to call the school if your child is involved in a conflict as either a victim or a bully. Work collaboratively with school personnel to address the problem. Keep records of incidents so that you can be specific in your discussion with school personnel about your child’s experiences at school.

• You may wish to arrange a conference with a teacher, principal or counselor. School personnel may be able to offer some practical advice to help you and your child. They may also be able to intervene directly with each of the participants. School personnel may have observed the conflict firsthand and may be able to corroborate your child’s version of the incident, making it harder for the bully or the bully’s parents to deny its authenticity.

• While it is often important to talk with the bully or his/ her parents, be careful in your approach. Speaking directly to the bully may signal to the bully that your child is a weakling. Speaking with the parents of a bully may not accomplish anything since lack of parental involvement in the child’s life is a typical characteristic of parents of bullies. Parents of bullies may also fail to see anything wrong with bullying, equating it to "standing up for oneself."

• Offer support to your child but do not encourage dependence on you. Rescuing your child from challenges or assuming responsibility yourself when things are not going well does not teach your child independence. The more choices a child has to make, the more he or she develops independence, and independence can contribute to self-confidence.

• Do not encourage your child to be aggressive or to strike back. Chances are that it is not his or her nature to do so. Rather, teach your child to be assertive. A bully often is looking for an indication that his/her threats and intimidation are working. Tears or passive acceptance only reinforces the bully's behavior. A child who does not respond as the bully desires is not likely to be chosen as a victim. For example, children can be taught to respond to aggression with humor and assertions rather than acquiescence.

- Be patient. Conflict between children more than likely will not be resolved overnight. Be prepared to spend time with your child, encouraging your child to develop new interests or strengthen existing talents and skills that will help develop and improve his/her self-esteem. Also help your child to develop new or bolster existing friendships. Friends often serve as buffers to bullying.

- If the problem persists or escalates, you may need to seek an attorney's help or contact local law enforcement officials. Bullying or acts of bullying should not be tolerated in the school or the community. Students should not have to tolerate bullying at school any more than adults would tolerate such situations at work.
